

2024 BC Cancer Planetary Health Nursing Internship Program

EXPRESSION OF INTEREST (EOI)

Cohort #2: July 2nd – September 20th, 2024

Cohort #3: September 23rd – December 13th, 2024

In our current climate crisis, we know the health of our planet impacts human health and, most importantly in our context, has implications on cancer incidence and outcomes. Recognizing the healthcare industry is a major contributor to greenhouse gases, BC Cancer has taken responsibility to evaluate our contributions to this crisis and is taking action to ensure innovative and sustainable solutions are created.

Nurses represent the largest professional group at BC Cancer. Nurses are well positioned in healthcare to identify opportunities to address climate-related challenges within the clinical environment, and act as drivers of actionable solutions to improve and promote planetary health. The Planetary Health Nursing Internship program was created to support nurses in actioning this important work.

Each 12-week internship will provide quality improvement and knowledge translation training, mentorship and resource support for direct-care nurses interested in implementing a planetary health initiative. There will be one internship spot available per cohort for each regional centre. Nurses accepted into the program will be backfilled from their current position for the duration of the internship; acceptance is dependent on the availability of staffing resources at the regional centre. To apply for this internship program, please complete the form below.
